4. Our Supply Chain

SIGMA is a system integrator that designs the mechanics, the hardware and the software of all its solutions where the best technologies available on the world market are integrated, the construction of the mechanical and hardware components is then outsourced to the various suppliers, if therefore is not considered the software component created by SIGMA's R&D laboratories, 100% of the other components is purchased from external suppliers.

Suppliers are selected based on the quality and competitiveness of their products and services, as well as on their compliance with social, ethical and environmental standards.

Sustainability standards and performance along the value chain also include aspects related to international human rights standards and labour laws.

Suppliers at every tier of the supply chain carry much of the management responsibility; nevertheless, Sigma is aware of the role that it can play in preventing human rights violations and promoting sound working conditions.

SIGMA is furthermore accountable for business relationships and works to eliminate vulnerabilities in supply chains. Where modern slavery or other human rights abuse are identified, SIGMA takes corrective action working together with suppliers and business partners.

Sigma endorses the United Nations (“UN”) Declaration on Human Rights and the International Labor Organization (“ILO”) Conventions.

Sigma is going to formalize a comprehensive set of Guidelines to address some issues already complied as legal obligations but not formalized in specific corporate documents such as child and forced labor, prohibition of trafficking and other forms of slavery, non-discrimination.

The formalization of the best practice of business conduct aims to ensure that all those third parties with whom Sigma maintains business relationships of a lasting nature such as suppliers, dealers, advisors and agents also comply with the ethical standards respected by all SIGMA staff.

Guidelines require that Sigma’s suppliers adhere, at a minimum, to the following principles: Human rights and working conditions:

- rejection of the use of forced or child labor in any form
- recognition of the right to freedom of association in accordance with applicable laws
- freedom from harassment and discrimination
- safeguarding of employee health and safety
- guarantee of equal opportunities, fair working conditions, appropriate working time, equal compensation and right to education and training for employees

Supplier contractual clauses

In order to address, prevent, and mitigate any potential impacts, contractual clauses shall be introduced and Sigma’s General Terms and Conditions of any new purchase orders with suppliers to comply with both the principles set forth by the Sigma S.p.A. Code of Conduct.

If a supplier fails to follow these principles, Sigma can require the supplier to implement a corrective action plan, which is then verified through audit activities, and reserves the right to terminate the business relationship.

6. Due diligence for Slavery and Human Trafficking

Our due diligence processes include actions to safeguard against human rights abuses in any part of our business and in our supply chain. As part of our initiative to internally identify and mitigate any related risks, the following tools have been developed:

- an annual survey

aimed at detecting any case of child and forced labour at worldwide Sigma’s companies, including those located in countries that have not ratified ILO Conventions on these issues.

In addition, potential suppliers, to be eligible, must demonstrate that they have adopted a code of conduct, a certified system for managing employee health and safety, and a program that promotes sustainability, both internally and along the supply chain. These conditions help ensure that they monitor and manage environmental aspects, labour practices, human rights, and their impact on society.
